

Imagine me a frog... my voice just like a drum,
I started as a tadpole, grew to be real handsome.
The ladies want to kiss me. It really makes me wince.
I know just why they do it—they think that I'm a prince.

I am a very fine specimen, that word sounds really funny,
My eyes are just the perfect size, I'm cuter than a bunny.
My legs are strong and green, my belly's nice and fat.
I have warts the size of marbles, I can jump just like a cat.

Now if you're feeling jealous or think that I am bragging,
It's just that I have confidence, the thing that some are lacking.
Take a lesson from this frog, confident you'll be,
Bulging eyes and warts—who wants to be me?
